They had an unusually exciting Sunday in Chicago yesterday. The negro Allen, who murdered Officer Wright, was captured, and his body literally riddled with bullets. Full particulars will be found in our telegraphic columns.

Congress meets to-day, and will remain in ression till the 3d day of March, when the 47th congress expires. It is hardly necessary to say that congress has learned a great many things since it adjourned last July, and will therefore give the country a respectable session.

It is not unlikely that even a sank-bank will shortly become a sort of a bonanza. New York city has invested two million dollars in sand, and it is estimated that not less than 4500 tons of sand are shipped to that city daily. When all thouses of sand are understood there may be a regular stampeds in the sand industry. Yorktown will then be worth something to the country.

Mr. Ben. Perley Poore, for more than a quarter of a century the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal, says he knows that William Morgan died in Sayrnia. The reported confession of Whitney to Thurlow Wood, which has been made public since the death of the latter, will revive the discussion as to what manner and in what place. Morgan died; and after months of talk people will be no wiser than they were be-

Senator Platt, chairman of the senate committee on pensions, has made the statement that in his judgment $150,000,000 will be required for the payment of pensions in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881. Congress will make appropriations for that year this winter. The amount appropriated for the current fiscal year was $100,000,000. The commissioner of pensions has asked congress to give him for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884 $103.952,980, which includes $2,877,980' for the payment of salaries, etc.

Dr. Bliss has been much offended by the Carfield board of audit. The doctor became so much puffed up by the prominence he obtained by becoming the selfappointed physician to the lamented Garfield, that he imagined the services he rendered the president during the eighty days of a matchless struggle for life, were worth ten times more than in an ordinary case of medical service. He wanted $25,000, a little more than $300 a day, but the board of audit has allowed him $5,500, a sum abundantly sufficient to pay him for all the services he rendered the unfortunate president. Agnew and Hamilton were allowed $5,000 each; Rayburn and Boynton, $1,000 each: Edson, $3,000. The bills for services and supplies were all settled, as were also bills for extra services of government employes, Steward Cramp being allowed but $300; and Private secretary Pruden,

New York city, the modern Sodom, has a new Sunday law, and the superintendent of the police force says he will be compelled to see that the law is strictly enforced. The city of New York has never paid any regard for the sancity of the Sabbath. Many of the business men there have done on that day very much as they would do on any other day, and therefore there strictly has been no Sunday in that city. Under the new order of things, saloons will be closed, newspapers will not be sold on the streets, barber shops will not be opened for customers, no driving for pleasure will be permitted on the boulevards, and the policemen are ordered to do all they can to stop the driving in Central park. It is an encouraging thing for Gotham to even protend to wear the cloak of righteousness: or profess common morality.

Last Saturday Special Agent J. D. King, of this city, and Mr. McAfee, of Chicago, caused the arrest in Chicago, of Dr. E. S. McLeod, alias Dr. James, for distributing obscene literature through the mails, under the titles of "Marriage Guide" and "Advice to Youth." Mr. King worked his game in a very sharp manner, got all the evidence necessary

A farmer in Missouri has had nine down their salaries, and in many of the departments there is plenty of room to do this. So much has been said throughout the country, and with such telling effect, against the present civil service system that reform is the cry among republican members as the one needful thing to redeem the party.

DORSEY'S CASE.

Wayne MacVeagh Pays His Respects to Stephen W. Dorsey.

Dorsey's Threat Against the President, as Voiced by Joe Pulitzer.

Dorsey the Custodian of Mighty Campaign Secrets.

New York, Dec. 4.-A reporter called upon ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh, who was in the city to-day, to make some inquiries in regard to statements contained in Mr. Dorsey's letter affecting Mr. MacVeagh ox-Posimaster General Jamos. Mr MacVeagh was apparently in a very cheerful frame of mind, seeming not to rogard Mr. Dorsey's letter as worthy of any reply. In answer to inquiries, however, he said: "If Dorsey, or any of the other starroute thieves, find any real solace in their troubles in lying about Mr. James and myself, I hope that they will continue to do so. It sooms about the only recourse now left to them, and I feel about it much as the old man did about his wife beraing him-it relieved her and didn't do him any harm." "The letter contains statements that might be classed as startling if true," remarked the reporter,

"To-days's letter is very tame reading after the picturesque lying Dersey did in the letter which he published some time ago, and which he asserted was sent to President Garfield before the formation of the cabinet."

"You do not care, then, to reply to Mr. Dorsey's statements?"

"No; I must be excused from ontering into any controversy with a man like Dorsey. It was my official duty to examino these eases, and the only conclusion possible from such examination was that Dorsey is a thief. In that opinion Postmaster General James agreed. Since then Attorney General Brewagreed. Since then Atterney General Brewster, Mr. Bliss, Mr. Merrick, Mr. Kor, two grand juvers, and ton out of twelve of the men who tried the case, have expressed the same opinion. As Dorsey, therefore, has been tried, indicted, and once substantially convicted in the result of the trial of Redell and Miner, it is impossible, with the most moderate self-respect, to notice anything he says, even if he had not shown himself to be a most reckless and shameless liar about both the living and the dead. By the by, "queried Mr. MacVeagh," I wonder if there is another man in the United States who after indirect and substantial conviction for stealing public money, would hold on to the secretaryship of a national comcommittee?"

viction for stealing public money, would hold on to the secretaryship of a national comcommittee?"

"Mr. Dorsey rofers in his letter to an alloged meeting at the postodice department at which you were prosent with Mr. James and Col. Ingersoll, who appeared as counsel for Dorsey. Was there such a moeting?"

"A roport of that alleged conference was published at the time. Dorsey and his computed went there, and Mr. James sent for mo. It was well-known at the time that my own convictions were that the only proper way to investigate the frauds was before a court and jury, and that I refused to listen to any arrangement for any other kind of investigation. That was the origin of the enmity of the thieves toward me. They believed that but for me the matter could have been smethered, and certificates of good character given all around. In that they were mistaken, however. They forget that bohind me was Postmaster General James, and behind him President Carfield, and back of him an intelligent press and an aroused and indignant people, making any such compromises with crime impossible. In this regard I have received far more credit that I deserved. I could not have smoothered the cases it I had tried."

"Ex-Postmaster General James was at his office in the Lincoln bank to-day, and when a reporter made inquiry of him in regard to the Dorsey letter, he said: "I do not intend to eater into any confeversy with Dorsey. At the proper time I will have something to say, but there is no need of it now. My conviction of those men is the same new as before, and is well expressed in the closing words of Mr. Browster's letter to the president, in which, if I romember right, he said that they are the worst band of organized scenadrels that ever existed since the commencement of the government.

PULITZER'S SENSATION.

PULITZER'S SENSATION.

ST. LOUIS, Doc. 4.—Joseph Pulitzer, owner and editor of The Post-Dispatch, writes to his paper over his own signature a startling statement concerning the star-route robbors. He says: "The prosecution was in the hands of Atty, Grn. MacYeagh, who was a very hard mut indeed to manage. Garfield could not control. MacYeagh without great difficulty. He foresaw a break of his relations with his own atterney general, and did not want to compromise himself. When it was first known that MacYeagh really intended to have Dorsey indicted and prosecuted, Dorsey came all the way from his well-advertised sheep ranch in New Mexico, and went to the White House.

Every indicted and prosecuted, Dorsey came all the evidence necessary to convict the doctor—in fact made the doctor convict humself—and then quietly took the fellow in. He is now in july and will undoubbedly find his way to the penitentiary. The doctor is no relation to Sauth Whittier, atias Dr. James, who was arrested hist year for 'the same crime and sentenced to the penitentiary for three years, but had his sentence commuted by the president of the United States to eighteen months in the Cook county jul. The writers and publishers of this kind of literature are having an uneasy time of it.

The republicans in congress have decided to do a good thing before the session closes on the 3d of next March. They will hold a canens this week, and will then talk over the matter and decide to make the most of the short seasion and put the party in congress on a solid footing before turning legislation over into the hands of the democrats. A leading member of the appropriations committee said Saturdaythat it would be the policy of a majority of that committee to cut the appropriations down to the lowest possible amount without cripping the public service. No appropriations will be made for anything that is not absolutely essential. The rule will be to curtail the number of employes, rather than cut for it is the same Arthur now, by the comeat iron of fate, directing the prosecution of Dersey, who, at the colebrated banquet at Delmonico's delivered the sulogy stating that it was Dorsey more than anybody else who deserved credit for carrying fadiana and electing Carfield and Arthur. It is per-electing Carfield and Arthur. It is perfectly well-known and no secret whatover, that during the presidential campaign Arthur as chairman of the New York state committee and Dorsoy as secretary of the national committee and confident of Garfield were in the closest possible intimacy and constant considential inferences. After the Indiana campaign was over Dorsoy and Arthur managed, the campaign in New York, upon which everybody mow the presidential election actually depended. It is well known that Dorsoy alone and personally raised a very large sum of money, which he and Arthur jointly distributed. It is a part of the secret history of that campaign that the Republican finance committee, of which stach bankers as Levi P. Morton, Komtzo, and Seligman were members, raised over $350, 400 and blaced it in the hands of Arthur and Dorsey. Jay Gould alone contributed $100, 400. The money was actually locked up in which shen bankers as Levi P. mornor, acountzo, and Soligman were members, raised over $320, 600 and blaced it in the hands of Arthur and Dorsey. Jay Gould alone contributed $100, 600. The money was actually locked up in the safe of the Fifth Avenue hotel, where the Republican campaign committee had its head-quarters, and the money was paid out in one of the rooms of that hele! by Dorsey upon the personal criters of Choster A Arthur, then chairman of the Republican state committee. The larger part of that money was expended in New York city and Brooklyn. That it was well expended was shown by the result—the extraordinary reduction in the Democratic yote, which alone onabled the Republicans to carry the state. These are all facts communicated by prominent Republicans who had personal knowledge of the transactions. Though a secret to the general public, the facts are known to quite a number of the more important politicians. It is quite likely that, if Dorsey should be convicted, these campaign secrets may use remain secret very long. Dorsey has bushels of notes and lotters received by both Carfield and Arthur during the late campaign. He has an exact second of the money spent in Indiana, showing the amount sent each county. He has also the exact figures of the vast sums of money contributed and expended for the purpose of carrying New York. If the secretary of the Republican national committee should go to the wall in the coming trial, it is possible that a great deal of the according that intensely interesting history of the late prosidential campaign will become pretty widely known."

IN HIS BOOTS.

Bill Allen, the Colored Murderer of a Chicago Policeman, Hunted to HIs Death.

He Is Betrayed by One of His Race, and His Hiding-Place Made Known.

In an Attempt at Escape He Dangerously Wounds Still Another Officer.

At Bay in a Hen-Coop, He is Literally Riddled with Bullets.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—On Wednesday morning of last week Bill Allen, a negro who had become quite noted as a desperade, fractured the skull of William Jones, a colored porter on the Northwestern railway. That night three policemen attempted to arrest him in a room on Washington street, but he broke away from them after sending a bullet through the brain of Officer Clarence Wright. He has remained in the city ever since.

About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a colored girl, who lives at 134 North Habstod street, ran into James Mulvahil's saloon, a few steps north, and told him that Bill Allon had just entered the house. Mulvahill at once notified his brother, Officer Patrick Mulvahill, who was at his boarding-house on Union street, and the two returned to capture the desperade. As they reached the house Allen appeared at a window. "There he is!" exclaimed the policeman, "I see him in there!" At this moment there was a report, a bullet crashed through the window, struck his left hand, glanced upward and buried itself in his forehead just above his left eye. The officer foll to his knees. Allen opened the door and rushed past him. The officer turned and fired two shots at the two shots at the fugitive, but failed to bring him down. Allen returned the fire, but without erfeet. He then continued his flight, and was soon lost to sight. A crowd gathered at once, and the pursuit and search began. Within fifteen minutes after the first shot was fired, between 2,000 and 3,000 people were engaged in the hunt, and the throng seemed to increase in numbers every moment. Nearly every man carried a revolver in his hand. It was the strangest eight ever seen in our streets.

Word had been sent to all the police stations, and the patrol wagons soon arrived, one after another, loaded with men. The search was then systematized. The most conflicting stories were told as to the direction Allen had taken. Eye witnesses of the shooting were finally found, and from them more reliable information was obtained.

Allen was seen to run cut of the back door of the house from which he fired the first shot and turn down a narrow alloy which runs east and west from Halsted to Green streets. He continued down the alley natil he reached Green street, when he turned and ran south on Green until he passed Kinzie street. At the corner of Green and Kinzie street there sands an old building facing on the Kinzie street railroad tracks. Behind this building Allen disappeared. Frod Lang, a 29-year-old youth, was standing on the Halsted street viaduot and saw him disappear behind the building. This young man strek to his story, despite the numerous statements to the contrary, and afterward furnished very material aid in discovering the marderer. Near the mill, on Kinzie street, there is a chickon-coop.

To the west of 182 Kinzie street there is another estage, numbered 182, and in the roar of this cottage there is a chickon-coop.

To the west of 182 Kinzie street there is another estage, and between the houses there is a narrow vacant let. It was first supposed that Allen was hid under the houses at 186 Kinzie street, and nearly all of the officers showed a decided antipathy to going under the house to see if he was there, a In the meannime the boy. Fred Lang, had guided Sergeant John Whoeler, of the Union street patrol wagen, to the chicken coop and insisted that he saw Allen disappear near the spot Lang entered the place, and seeing a small box in the corner attempted to raise the cover and look in. If slifted the cover a couple of inches, when it was suddenly pulled down by some one inside of the box. The boy immediately fold Sergeant Wheeler that there was some one in the box. Wheeler replied that there was "nothing but chickens in there," and attempted to pull up the cover himself. He found that some one was helding it from the inside, and he turned to Lang and officers Stahl and Roach and told them to run for help as he had the man. They rushed out, and just as they did so the cover of the box was suddonly raised, and two revolvers were pointed out. As they were pointed out had one of the door and held it with his right land, while he held a revolver in his left hund and thrust its through one of the open continued down the alley natil he reached Green street, when he turned and ran south on master, and troth coop wherein the murderer was eaged.

As Wheeler jumped back from the door Allen sprang out and throwing up his hands, yolled, "I give up."

"It is too late, you d—d murderer," yeiled a man, and there was another velley.

As Allen fell he still clung to the revolver in his left hand and fried to fired it, but the fast stiffening muscles refused to obey his will, and the weapon was not discharged. He still tried to fight as he fell, and an officer struck in the mouth with the butt of a revolver.

As the firing was heard a cheer was raised, and it gained in volume as it ran down he surging crowd on the railroad track until it culminated in a mighty rear of triumph. It took the combined effects of a large number of level headed officers to prevent the mob from anuthating the not yet lifeless form of the desporade.

The body was thrown into the Things for the of level headed officors to prevent the mash from mutilating the not yet Effices form of the desperado.

The body was thrown into the Thirty-fifth street patrol wagon and started for the Desplaines street station. The crowd followed and made several attempts to gain possession of the body. By the time the wagon reached the station it was surrounded by a howling mob numbering nearly 3,000 people. The seems from a window of the Desplaines Street station, was startling, and such as and probably never been seem in Chicago before. It looked more like a lynching party in some wild Western city than a scene in the third city in the union. Yells of "Lynch him, yand like expressions of American sentiment filled the air. Chief Doyle was standing on the steps of the station vainly endeavoring to scothe the savage breasts by the power of oratory. His voice could not be heard more than two feet away, and he at last gave up the job in disgust. The situation was beginning to look scrious. No officer could have been induced to fire into that mob, as the sentiments, which they expressed were those which they themselves felt but dared not express. Finally Capt. Bonfield, who was near the patrol wagon in his buggy, drew his revolver and threatened to shoot the first nan who laid hands upon the body. This checked the crowd for a few moments, and the wagon was driven around to the side entrance, when the corpse was taken out and carried into the station.

The crowd grow larger, and domanded that the murderer be turned ever to them. They refused to believe that Allen was dead. At

The crowd grow larger, and domanded that the murderer be turned over to them. They refused to believe that Allen was dead. At tast a revel method was adopted to satisfy them. The body, while yet warm, was washed and everything taken off it but the trousers. The hands were them crossed on the breast and tied, and the body was placed on a cot and hoisted up to one of the side basement windows of the station. The mob was then allowed to form in pairs and march past, taking one glance and then moving on to make room for those behind. The eyes of the dead desperade were partially open and the mouth and face were stained with blood. Five bullet holes were visible, two under the right arm, which alone were fatal, one in the left breast, and a ball ip each leg.

MRS. LANGTRY.

The Wires Vibrate with the News that She Has Quarreled with Mrs. Labouchere.

The Criticisms of the Press Have Astonished and Pained the Jersey Lily.

NEW YORE, Dec. 4.-There were rumors of war Saturday in the neighborhood of the Albomario Hofel, and also of Wallack's theatro. No one knew just what was the matter, and yet everyone was sure that some thing was the matter. It finally transpired that a deep and direful quarrel had taken place between Mrs. Langity and Mrs. Labouchere. No one knew why there had been a quarrel. It was rumored that Mrs. Labouchero had complained that the Jersey Lily flirted on the stage with the occupants of the boxes at Wallack's theatro and visited the boxes between the acts, The Tribune announces that there has been a quarrel, but did not give the reason for it.

The only positive facts which could be ascortained were that Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Labouchere had indulged in some very elevated and tragic language, but had refrained from taking any undue liberties with oach other's hair or eyes; and that Mrs. Labouchare had subsequently packed up her possessions in several large trunks and departed suddenly, mysteriously, but emphatically, from the Albermarlo hotel. It was also stated very definitely that Mrs. Labouchere would not go to Boston with Mrs. Langtry, but would go to Richmond, Va., to visit a Where Mrs, Labouchere went was not even a matter of conjecture. Every one gave it up at once, and in Wallack's theatro there was a great and gloomy silence in regard to all that might, could, would or should have taken The members of the management smiled very complacently, and looked as if they had never heard of any distarbance in their lives. Two or three young men with eye-glasses and elevated collars inquired at the Albemarle, hotel as to whether any of Mrs. Langiry's hair had been pulled out, as they wanted to secure a few locks; but they went away sailly disappointed in heart and as empty-handed as they came.

Ar. Abbey was ashed if he was satisfied with the results of the Langery season in New York.

"I should think I ought to be," said the manager. "Mrs. Langery has played what I believe to be the broader expression of the production o "I should think I ought to be," said the mannager. "Mrs. Langtry has played what I believe to be the largest engagement ever played by a theatrical star in this country. Bernhardt took in more money, the total receipts for her four weeks being $80,45%, while Mrs. Langtry's amounted to $61,803.13. But Mile. Bernhardt played in Booth's theatre, which is more than a third larger than Wallack's, and her prices were one-third higher. I can thoroughly satisfied with the engagement. To have equaled Mrs. Langtry's engagement in actual attraction Mile. Bernhardt should have played to $120,000."

The largest night's receipts were the actual triaction of Pho largest night's receipts were these of the first performance, when the seats and boxes were sold at auction, the total being $6,549.75. Next to this came the benefit mut-$6,549.75. Next to this came the benefit in itinco for the sufferers by the Park theatre fro, when $2,215.28 was received. The lowest roceipts for any night were those of last Monday

—$1,400. The largest week was the first, whon $18,765.25 was taken. Those figures were furnished by James H. Palser, Mr. Abboy's treasurer, who took the trouble to swear to them before a betary public. Mrs. Langtry left for Boston vesterday.
In an interview Mrs. Langlry said:

"My roception in New York has been most kind, and I have been greatly pleased with it."

"Do you find any difference between the New York and London audiences?" asked the reporter.

Now fork and London addresses: asked the reporter.

I think the audiences here applied more vokemently," replied Mrs. Langry, "but they do not applied as frequently as they do in London. There they applied as soon as any particular piece of acting pleases them, but here they wait until the end of the act. I think, perhaps, the American way is better, for it does not interrupt the progress of the play."

for it does not interrupt the progress of the play."

"Which of the three plays that you have performed in here do you prefer, and which do you think was the most popular?"

"I really have no preference myself, but I think 'The Unequal Match' and 'The Honeymoon' were liked the best by my audiences."

"It has been runnered that you intend to leave the stage before very long; is this true?"

"No, not at all. I have already made my engagements for next season in England, and I intend to remain on the stage. I have adopted it as a profession, and I shall stick to it."

"Do you think American women are beautiful?"

"Do you think American women are beautiful?"

"I do, indeed. I have seen some levely women here, particularly at Delmonico's, but I wonder at hier wearing bonne's in the evening. I think they look much prettier without them at that time, particularly in the theatres. If American ladies would attend theatres in evening dress and without hats the audience would appear to better advantage."

It is said that Mrs. Langty is greatly disappointed at the reception accorded her by the New York press. No wonder that she is, for the treatment she has had at the hands of the press has been something unique in her experience. The fact is that nost of the English papers, having the fear of the prince of Wales and the best society before their cyes, to add in the humblest fashion to the stage-struck Mrs. Langtry, and did not dare to express their homest opinions. We know now that there was no honost speaking-out on the part of the English press, for they admit is themselves. They are printing, at length, the adverse criticisms of the Americans are supposed to talk out plainly and say in effect that there is substantial truth in this merciless condemnation of her acting. One cannot but admire the courage with which Mrs. Langtry smillingly faces her daily toil, not withstanding the criticisms that seen almost bitter in their severity. Actors and actresses who have toiled for many years to win moderate success on the stage are very much pleased because this more novice has not found it casy on purely fictitions grounds to command approval for her drumstic efforts from the press and public. It is believed that such an onlyouring of critical disparagement has nover before been visited upon a "star" actross. Such papers and have the reputation of choosing their words with some care, are the severest censors of Langtry. Her financial prospects in the country would doubless be jeopardized by the merciless plainness of speech with which the press have treated her performances were it not that the public seems to have a great curiosity ognition whatever.

New York, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Labouchere, who was found in the rooms at the Albemarle to-night by a reporter of The World, mair to-light by a reporter of The World, said that her attention had been called to the haragraph amnouncing that she had had a quarrel with Mrs. Langtry after Mrs. Langtry had left the hotel for Buston, and that she was at a loss to undersound why anyone should publish a statement so inaccurate and so discourteous. She had had no quarrel of the sort described. It was hardly necessary to slay with Mrs. Langtry.

"But you are not going to Boston, are you, Mrs. Labouchere,"
"No; I am not going to Boston."

"No; I am not going to Boston."
"Did you not intend to go to Boston with Mrs. Langtry when you came to America?"
"Undoubtedly; I came out to America with Mrs. Langtry when you came to America with Mrs. Langtry when you came to America?"
"Undoubtedly; I came out to America?"
"Undoubtedly; I came out to America?"
"I have not quarreled with Mrs. Langtry. I have not wish to travel with her, but I have not one wish to travel with her, but I have had occasion to remonstrate with her in this city, which scenared to me likely to interfere with ney once of the stage, and certain acquaint. She did not take these remonstrances in good part, and Insisted on keeping up the acquaintance at Boston. I then told her plainly that I could not possibly concent to accompany her in these circumstances, and she preferred to go to Boston alone. That is the whole story. Mr. Hughit stated that he had but little information to give. All that he could say was that nothing was accomplished and the situation remained the same as before. Not being able to agree upon anything, they resolved to hold another meeting at New York, Friday, Dee, S, when a further effort to bring about a settlement of the troubles would be made. Mr. Hughitt also stated that he has great hopes that some satisfactory result would be reached at that meeting.

On moeting the father of the deal girl, Mr. Frayae was greatly affected, and would have fallen to the ground but for the assistance of Mr. Charlos Foster, his friend and manager. He said: "I have searcely been able to cat and drink, and entirely to sleep, since Translay, and entirely mistorium. The accident happened through the breaking of the breech-screw of my gun, an accident which it was impossible to forse. My plans for the fulure are yet in decided, but I have given away my guns and all the costumes and progreties used by me in the fatal drama, and will never play 'Si Sloeum' again." Mr Frayue, with some of his friends, went to the Morton house.

An expressman was picked up for delivering a scalskin cloak. No attempt was made to interfere with the nowspapers or the telegraph offices, and the hotel hars suffered ne amonance.

A Thrilling Story of the Burning of the Steam-Barge R. G. Peters.

Wrapped in Flames in a Heavy Sea, She Sinks with All on Board.

The Crew, Consisting of Thirteen Souls, All Lost.

Cirrexcio. Dec. 4. The lake barge A. W. Luckey, one of the consorts of the steam-barge R. G. Peters, arrived here at a late hour Saturday night, bringing news of the loss of the R. G. Peters with all on board. Ole Swansen, the mate of the Luckey, gives the following statement:

"Wo left St Joseph Friday evening, behind the steam-barge R. G. Peters. The weather was very rough. There was a stiff northeast wind and it was snowing thick. Everybody on the Luckey was in good spirits, for we did not forget that this was our final trip of the season. As we got out, I think the son. As we got out, I think the storm increased. The wind was ferrific and the snow made it blinding. There was a beavy sea, but we didn't mind that, for I think we were in good shape to weather almost any squall. Some time after 2 o'clock this morning we saw flames breaking out of the Peters, and knew that the steamer was on fire. At this time, as near as I can calculate, we were about thirty-five miles off from Milwankee. The Peters burned rapidly. We had we were about thirty-five miles off from Mil-wankee. The Peters burned rapidly. We had a long line, and I don't know how it left the Peters—whether it was cut off or burned off. We were in no shape to be of any assistance to the crew of the Peters, as we had jost our center-board, and had burst our mainsait. We were, in fact, only a little butter than helpless ourselves. The captain ordered the barge hove to, and we were obliged to see the flames donaway and remain utterly powerless to res-have to, and we were obliged to see the flames die away and remain utterly powerless to resent the crow of the burning steamer. It was pretty tengh, but it had to be. The wind increased until it blowed a perfect harricane, and although the captain was disposed to take any risk that promised to help the crew of the Peters, it would have been sure death to put out a loat with such a sea on. We continued to lay to for some time, thinking we might possibly pick up some of the survivers but we say nobody. The storm was a mighty savage one, and the water was running higher and higher. I am not able to say how many mon west down and the water was running higher and higher I am not able to say how many mon went down with the Peters. It was a tough sight to see that steamer burn right before our eyes and not be able to lift a hand to save the poor fellows aboard of her."

The Peters was commutated by Capt. Chas. Smith, of Manistee, a man aged about 40 years and a very caroful and competent man. He was unmarried, but had relatives living at Manistee. The mate was John Larsen, aged about 42 years, and one of the best known and

CONGRESS. The Business to Come Up at To-Day's Session. Washington, Dec. 4 .- The meeting of congrose to-day will plunge it into immediate conact with the tarist. The great tarist commission has its report ready and must, to comply with the law, present it to-day. It can per-maps be put aside, but it will be on the lable s an overlasting bugbear, whether on the table of the ways and means committee of the table of the house, and will be the sub-ject of much contention in the matter of taking tup for consideration. The question of reducject of much contention in the metter of Cakinging fro internal revenue taxes will hardly wait for the turil report, though the relation is so close that trought to wait. Commissioner Ramm gave congress a topic in his report which will arouse curiosity. He transcends the policy of his domain to show how the revenues can be ent down sufficiently, even if the tax is left on whisky, beer, and cobacco, by taking the hard ordered and principal matters to be either debated or dodged before the holidays. The appropriation hills will be justed doing and since their consideration has precedence they may help those who want to dodge the other matters to use up the time until after the holidays' meeting. It is impossible to say how the senate will occupy its time previous logating an appropriation bill to work upon, though it has the title revenue bill sent over by the house last summer, and it may condescond to proceed at once to its consideration.

Death of the Archbishop of Canterbury,

LONDEN, Dec. 3 .- The Archbishop of Canterbury died at 7.15 this morning.

It is understood that the dean of Westminster, on behalf of the queen, has offered burial for the archbishop in Westminster abbey. The decision rests with the decased's daughters. Muffled peaks were rung in the adjacent town of Corydon, and the archbishop's death was teuchingly referred to at the morning services. easionally asking for water. About Hat night

Why It Was Discontinued.

The post-office at Iron Rod, M. T., has been discontinued, and the explanation is thus given by an officer of the depart-"A post-office agent, while ofment: ment: "A post-office agent, white or-cially visiting various offices in Montana for the purpose of correcting any irreg-ularities of postmasters, stopped at Iron Rod. Going into the postoffice he found the room divided into three sectionsfirst a saloon, next the postoflice, and last a fare bank. The mail-bag was brought in, a rough-looking customer opened it and emptied the contents on the floor. The entire crowd at once got down on their hands and commenced overhauling the letters, among which several were registered, and selected such as they wanted. After they were through the remaining letters were shoveled into a candle-box and placed on the bar. The special agent, thinking the office needed a little regulating, asked the barkeeper, who had received and distributed the mail, if he was the postmaster. He answered 'No.' Are you the assistant postmaster?' 'No.' Where is the postmaster?' 'Outmining.' Where is the assistant postmaster?' 'Cone to is the assistant postmaster? Gone to Hell's Canon; and by thunder Bill Jones has got to run this office next week; it's his turn. The Government official then stated who he was, and demanded the keys of the office. The bartender coolly took the candle-box from the bar, placed it on the floor and gave it a kick, it on the floor and gave it is know, send-it out of the door, saying: "There's your postoffice, and now git." The Mistake Men Make.

We have often wondered why it is that men so persistently engage in pursuits for which they have no fitness. An inscrutable Providence seems to have implanted in the minds of many men an insatiable desire to be forever doing precisely the thing that they cannot do. The common-sense rule in life would seem to be for every man to find out, if possible, what he can do best, and then do it with his might. But how many men seem to proceed on the rule of finding out what they can do worst, and then refusing to do anything but that. We are all of us not quite satisfied to be satisfied to Half the unhappiness of life, half the failures that men make, are traceable to this cause. Sometimes the foible is simply laughable. When a little man swells about with the air of a giant; when a youth with a high, squeaky voice persists in singing bass; when a smooth-faced man will wear a full heard—we smile at the result, and no harm is done. Somebody has made himself ridiculous, but he is happy in doing it, and nobody else is made miserable. But here is a man with excelent gifts for making a good blacksmith, but he will be nothing but a lawyer; there is another with the making of a first-class farmer in him, and he will be control a precadent with a third value. only a preacher; still a third, whose ideas never soared above the dullest of prose, fancies he is born to be a poet, and inflicts his verses on a long-suffering world whenever he can find anybody to print them.

If perversity of this kind made only the victim himself unhappy, it might be borne more patiently. But not only do his family and relatives share the misfortunes that inevitably pursue through life the man who insists on doing what he cannot do; upon all who know him falls a part of the burden, also. The man of this type is always, in his own opinion, an ill-appreciated man of genfar better things of Fortune than the fickle dame has bestowed on him; and his friends have to hear plaints of this mis rights have to hear plants of this kind ad nauseam. Happy, indeed, they may reckon themselves if only their ears are besieged, and their purses are not laid under contribution by these ne'er-do-wells.

The cure for the evil is not easy to find. The chronic case is probably hopeless, and beyond the reach of any remedies known to man. When caught young, this kind of man may be turned into a descent and respectable citizen. The origin of his troubles is often injudicious praise administered by some well-meaning person. If some candid and wise friend would say to the budding young poet: "See here, young man; you can never rise above medioc-rity in verse, and had best content yourself with plain prose," it might be the making of him. As the judicious application of a bucket of cold water at the right moment will prevent a great conflagration, so a little quiet repression administered at the critical time would often prevent conceit from devouring a man's character. Is it objected that this course would sometimes result in the repression of real genius—the "mute, inglorious Miltons" of whom the poet sings? Genius is a hardy plant, and is not so easily nipped in the bud. What is in a man will generally come out at some time, if he can only be prevented from trying to get out of him-self what is not there. And if the ob-jection were valid, think what wrecks would be prevented by the process, and say if the good would not overbal-ance the evil. Better risk marring a genills once in a contage than making a genius once in a century than make so many bores every year. -N. Y. Exam-

They can be converted into a substance resembling celluloid by pecl-ing them and after soaking in water, impregnated with eight parts of sulphuric acid, drying and pressing between sheets of blotting paper. By subjecting the mass to great pressure billiard balls can be made of it rivaling ivory in hardness.—N, Y, Herald.

Preparing Bees for Winter.

The first step is to be certain that the colonies are all strong in numbers; if they are not, it is befter to unite the weaker until all are strong. Next, the amount and character of the stores for winter should be looked after. A strong colony of bees, wintered out-of-doors, seldom consumes more than twentyseldom consumes more than twentyfive pounds of honey, but, to be on the safe side, it is better to allow it thirty pounds. It is better that the honey be early gathered, well ripeued, and nicely sealed over. Some apiarists think that an excess of pollen in the combs sometimes leads to dysentery or bee cholera, hence it will be just as well, and perhaps better, in preparing bees for winter, to leave out those combs that contain the most pollen. If from any cause it is suspected that the honey is not suitable for winter stores, then it should be extracted and the bees fed should be extracted and the bees led coffee A sugar made into a sirup by pouring a gallon of boiling water upon twenty pounds of sugar. This amount of sugar ought to be sufficient to carry a colony of bees through the winter. The feeding ought to be done early enough for the bees to get it scaled over before cold weather sets in.

One or two holes should be made through each comb, near the top, thus affording the bees a passage-way from comb to comb in cold weather.

Bees wintered out-of-doors ought to have some protection. A very good plan is as follows: First, make a sort of box or small pen around the bive by diving down the beauty of the sort of the s hive by driving down stakes and nailing boards to them. The space between the hives and boards, which should he about one foot, should be filled with dry chaff or saw-dust, pilling it on top of the hive also, and then the whole should be covered with a roof of boards. Before putting in the chaff or saw-dust a passage-way of boards should be made from the entrance of the hive to the outside of the inclosure, thus enabling the bees to fly out whenever the weather is such that they can. In very cold weather, this passage might be filled with straw.

But in our Northern climate there is, perhaps, no better place for wintering bees than a good, dry cellar. It would be better if the cellar were furnished with pure air through a six-inch tube extending two or three rods from the cellar, and several feet below the surface of the ground. By admitting the air in this manner, it would be warmed somewhat before entering the cellar. The impure air can be removed from the celiar by running a pipe to within a few inches of the celiar bottom, and connecting the upper end with the kitchen stove-pipe. A part of the cellar should be partitioned of separately for the bees, so that they may remain in perfect darkness, and be undisturbed.

During the "January thaw" it will. perhaps, be advisable to carry the bees out of doors and allow them to fly, when they should be returned to the cellar and left undisturbed until the soft maples are in blossom. Some of our best apiarists, however, do not remove their bees from the cellar during the whole winter.—Cor. Rural New Yorker.

Teaching Calves to Drink.

In the late issue of the Provisioner, England, there is a very funny account of a man's attempt to teach a calf how to drink. There is a fine description of the approach to the caif, with his great stupid eyes in full amaze. The man straddles him and attempts to push his head down into the milk, when the calf rises in his wonderment and carries the man across the stable and lands him head formers in the stable and lands him head foremost in the milk-pail. Then come the proverbial affidavits of strong come the proverbial allidavits of strong language, a pounding of the calf over the head with the empty pail, and the determination to let the bloody beast starve to death; all going to prove that calves of the old country have the same calf nature that they have in this country, which is, perhaps, no great wonder after all, as the trouble here so graphically described, does not really come from the calf, but from the ignorcome from the calf, but from the ignerance and stupidity of the genus homo that has, as some one says, a vast amount of human nature in it wherever

In teaching calves to drink there is a ht way as well as a wrong about it, and the chances are a hundred to one that the man who never learned the business will have as much trouble in his first offorts as he would in trying to steer a setting hen.

In the first place, the calf should be made to fast until his appetite is quite sharp. He should then be handled by two persons instead of one, unless the one has had a great deal of experience. If one holds his body still the other can readily manipulate his head, and as soon as he gets a good taste of the milk his wits soon to be comparable this head. wits seem to come about him, and a little coaxing will do the rest; but, of all things, have a little patience with him.

In the large breeding establishments that are now scattered all over the country, it is the universal practice to teach the calves to drink, for no other purpose than to save time and trouble in handling them. One man can read-ily feed a dozen or more calves, while it would almost demoralize a stable of cows to turn all these half crazy young things into the cows to suck. The worst calves to teach are not the lively and obstreperous ones, such as the above description alludes to, but the dull, stapid ones, that seem to have no ideas in their heads at all. We have been bothered for days with such a brute, and it is only the last pangs of starvation that seems to quicken their wits. There is certainly a material difference between a scrub calf and a thoroughbred—the latter learning, as a rule, without any hesitation. This probably comes from long association of the ancestors with human beings, making them more apt in understand ing what is needed, or possibly in not being so frightened at a man's presence and in that way losing their wits. - American Dairyman.

What is Cruelty to a Cat?

The trial of Hugh Devlin for cruelty to a cat called forth interesting medical testimony at Providence recently. Devlin had confessed that, having been annoyed by a huge tom-cat, he had chusked it alive under the ground, not wantonly, but because he thought it was the surest and most merciful way to take the animal's nine lives. The agent of the Humane Society contended that Devlin had done a cruel, wanton deed, but physicians testified for the defense that death by suffocation under ground was for any animal as easy and painless as death by drowning. The popular horror of being buried alive lad its origin, not in experience, but in the imagination, which pictured such a fate as terrible. Whatever Devlin's intent, he had caused the cat no more death agony than if he had followed the orthodox method and drowned it. Possibly, said one physician, the cat lived longer by three respirations than it would have done under water. Devlin was found not guilty of cruelty to a cat. -Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

-Mr. Peter Simmons, of Denver, Colorade, and Miss Grace Wright, of this city, were married at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. N. Carlson, No. 86 North Main atrect, at eleven o'clock this foreuoon, Rov. W. F. Brown, of the Presbytorian church, officiating. Mr. Simmons came to Janesville about two weeks ago to visit his sister, Mrs. N. Carlson, during which time he met and was introduced to Miss Wright, the result being as above stated. Mr. Simmons is a prosperous business man in Denver, and is said to have plenty of this world's goods to make his young bride happy. The bride Miss Wright, is the daughter of Mr. William Wright, of the second word, and is well known in this city, and has many friends here among the young people Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left this afternoon for their home in Denver, and took with them the hearty congratulations of many friends. -At a few minutes past 12 o'clock this afternoon an alarm of fire was telephoned the fire department, calling them to the Northwestern round house; and at the same time the whistle at the railroad shop, and the whistles of several locomotives, commenced an unearthly toots which startled everybody. The fire department responded in double- nick time, and in a few seconds West Milwau kee street was the scene of lively commotion; the entire fire department, with the steam ongines, hose carts, and hook and ladder truck, were in line going to the fire at break-neck speed. The street was full of people, on foot and in all kinds of vehicles, hurrying to the depot. Added to the screeching sounds of the steam whistles, the fire belis gave their clang and clatter, to help along the excited crowd. On arriving at the round house, the fire had been subdued by the railroad employes. The fire was in the roof of the wood shop, and is supposed to have caught from sparks from a passing locomotive. The damage was only trifling. as but few holes were burned in the roof. The fire department should have some credit for responding in such a lively manner at this alarm, as it had been inactive for a long time, the members almost forgetting that they belonged to such an organization-but they started at the tap of the bell.

The Minstrels. Next Wednesday evening the Rice & Hooley minstrels will give a performance ut Myers opera house. When this popular band of minstrels performed at Davenport, Iowa, the Gazette of that city | the capacity to fill it, we hope he will said: "The Rico & Rooley minstrels played to a good house last evening, being the first minstrel company to visit Davenport this amusement season. The company gave a good show as a whole, and made plenty of laughter for the spectators. The first or olio part of the programme has some fresh jokes well fold, and not a little good music, both vocal and orchestra. W. Henry Rice in his burlesque imitations was loudly comical. In the song and dance business, Kelly, O'Brien, Lyons and Lenry did handsomely. Billy Rico was himself one of the best old-time negro delineators who has ever taken the road."

Something New for Janesville. Mr. H. S. Woodruff has just put into his new buckle factory me the first ward, one of the 60-horse power boilers, known as the Firmenich safety boiler, manufactured by George C. Morgan & Co., of Chicago. The simple fact of putting in a new poiler would not require more than a brief mention; but as would be ready, which Judge Bennett this boiler is something entirely new in could try (he having been counsel in our city, an extended notice of its construction will be of interest to all who | the Clifford case from Racine, and the have anything to do with steam boilers. The boiler consists of two horizontal the murder of Spencer Turner. In the mud drums, and one steam drum, the steam and water compartments and mud drums being connected by a num- and light complexion, was arraigned and ber of heating tubes. There is a fire | plead "not guilty," with a clear voice and bridge wall dividing the interior of the an air of cheerful composure. He gave brick work into two compartments, and compelling the gases of combustion to over the bridge wall, and downwards in the rear compartments, escaping through a smoke box into the chimney. The mud drums, heating tubes, and the lower half of the steam and water drums are filled with water, which arrangement enables the division of a large supply of water into small spaces, which better absorbs the heat evolved by combustion, and results in a large saving of fuel. The lower or mud drums vary in size from twelve to twenty-four inches, and the upper or steam and water drums from twenty to thirty-six inches, and in length from four to twenty-four feet, according to the capacity of the boilers. The heating tubes are from two to three inch boiler flues, from three to sixteen feet long, arranged in two or three rows, expanded in the mud and water-drums. The masonry consists of plain brick walls lined in the inner sides with fire brick. The mud-drums and steem-drums are provided with large man-holes, which admit of ready examination of the whole interior of the boiler and easy cleaning and removal of sedi. ment." Such is a brief description of the new boiler. It is very highly recommended by those who have had them in use, for its many excellent points, surety against granted. There being no other business, disastrous explosions, durability, economy, no cleaning of flues, no hard firing, no foaming or printing, entirely dry steam, ease of access to all its parts. Mr. Woodruff has also purchased a new 40-horse power engine, manufactured in Syracuse, New York, and will soon bave t in position in his new building. This engine is also something new in this city, and is what is known as the straight line engine. Our mechanics who are curious to learn, should not fail to visit Mr. Woodruff's factory and inspect his new boiler and engine. Contradictory reports having been put in circulation concerning the business that called Mr. George C. Morgan to this city last week, and his appearance at the public meeting on Friday night, we will state that he was here on invitation of Mr. Woodruff, who requested that he come and inspect the mansonry around this boiler before it was completed. This and nothing more.

The new building of Mr. Woodruff, which is to be used for the manufacture of his patent buckle, is not yet completed, but the interior is rapidly approaching that end, and when it is done it will be one of the best arranged factories in the west. There is a place for everything and , everything is in its place. We will have something more to at $2.618.29 leaving a balance in the treessay in regard to this ostablishment in a
